

RUTH RETURNS TO DIAMOND AS DODGERS' COACH

Brooklyn Manager Announces Signing of Former Slugger

REPORT SALARY
WILL BE $15,000

Babe Will Be In Uniform
For Sunday Double
With Cubs

(By Associated Press)
NEW YORK, June 18.—Babe Ruth will return to baseball as coach of the Brooklyn Dodgers, General Manager Larry S. MacPhail announced today.

In a brief statement which he declined to amplify, MacPhail said Ruth had agreed to terms after a conference last night attended by Ruth, MacPhail, Burleigh Grimes, manager of the Dodgers, and Leo Durocher, shortstop and captain of the club.

In Uniform Tomorrow
Ruth will be in uniform for tomorrow's double-header with the Chicago Cubs.

The Babe, greatest home run hitter in the history of baseball, was playing golf and could not be reached immediately for comment. Officials of the Brooklyn club insisted that Ruth, who signed a contract covering the balance of the season, would serve as coach and that's all. Grimes, they said, would continue to hold his job as manager.

"It was Grimes, as a matter of fact," said one official, "who asked that we get Ruth."

One report, which could not immediately be verified, said the Babe's contract called for a $15,000 salary.

Ruth's wife, Claire, said the Babe was delighted at returning to baseball.

Offer Comes as Surprise
"After all you can't give 23 years of your life to a game like baseball without missing it," she said.

Mrs. Ruth said that the Brooklyn offer had come as a sharp surprise to Ruth. He was out fishing yesterday and did not learn that MacPhail wanted to see him until he returned to his home early last evening.

The conference, short and to the point, followed and Ruth was back in baseball for the first time since 1935.

Railway Clerk To Retire After 35 Years' Service

After almost 35 years of riding passenger trains, Price Cope of the Damascus road is going to retire on pension.

The oddest part of it, however, is the fact that he hasn't grown tired of trains nor anything connected with them. Secondly, he doesn't feel that he is ready to retire but government regulations decree that he must quit his job as a railway mail clerk because he has reached the age of 62.

35 Years of Service

When Cope retires from the service June 30 he will have been on the job continuously as a railway mail clerk for 35 years, all but four months. While still living at Rogers and when he was 27 years old he received his appointment Nov. 2, 1903.

Since that time he has ridden on trains an average of 135 miles a day. Total that up in months, years or even 35 years and you'll run into figures that would startle the mathematicians.

No extraordinary excitement has marked Cope's 35 years in the railway mail service. He's never been in a train wreck and, despite the fact that he's never been the victim of a holdup attempt, he carries a special .38 caliber revolver all the time.

After he received his appointment in 1903, Cope was assigned to short runs out of Pittsburgh. In July of 1904, however, he asked for and received orders to work on the Pittsburgh, Ft. Wayne and Chicago line. He has worked on that division, which goes through Salem, ever since.

In Charge For 11 Years
For the past 11 years he has been clerk in charge of the mail car. His schedule has been such that he makes two round trips between Pittsburgh and Chicago in six days and is then off for six days. This appealed to the veteran clerk for it allowed him time to devote to the numerous farm organizations with which he is associated in and around Salem.

The distance between Pittsburgh and Chicago is 438 miles and the time Cope is on the road is nine and one-half hours. He travels with trains No. 79 and 2, limiteds which make only a dozen stops each. Consequently, he and his assistants have to work fast sorting the mail and getting it ready for the next terminal.

A steam-heated wash bowl in the mail car has been the means of Cope having hot coffee on his trips. He prepares his drink in a coffee pot which he has carried for years, sets it over the steam valve under the wash bowl and in a few minutes the coffee's made. "We get pretty hungry on our trips and coffee with our sandwiches tastes mighty good," he remarked.

Starts In Pittsburgh
Cope hops a train to Pittsburgh to start every trip. In Pittsburgh, and before the return trips from Chicago, Cope and his crew have two and one-half hours of advance work before the train pulls out. The men stay with the car at all times, no matter what happens. If the car develops mechanical trouble and is sided until repairs are made, the clerks stay right on the job.

At the end of each run, the mail car is swept clean and inspected. Demerits are levied if even one piece of mail is left in the car.

Cope has seen many a show, or display of affection, or the part of the train pulls in at the stations, men and women kissing each other goodbye or extending greetings in a similar manner. "I've seen a lot of kissing in my time," he said.

But to the young chap who thinks riding a railway mail car is all fun, Cope adds a word: "It takes a fellow four or five years to really learn the business and a clerk has to be at his job for 15 years before he is really worth anything to the postal authorities."

Reports of every trip and the amount of mail handled has to be turned in daily. Clerks are subjected to three examinations a year.

99 1/2 Per Cent Right
School pupils would have reason to boast if they could get as high grades as Cope does in the examination.

Carl White Files
False Arrest Suit

LISBON, June 18.—Carl White of R. D. 4, Salem, filed suit in the local court today against the Mullins firm, Corp., asking $20,000 for false arrest.

White asserts he was imprisoned Oct. 22, 1937, at the behest of Mullins officials. He said an authorized agent of the firm arrested him in a Salem poolroom and took him to jail, where he was held until Oct. 27, when he arranged for his release.

He claims he was compelled to sign a release absolving the defendant firm of blame before he could gain his freedom. He asks $20,000 for the mental anguish and humiliation he suffered.

The petition does not set out the reason for the arrest.

STILLS SEIZED AT SALINEVILLE

Federal Agents Arrest
Operator; 100 Gallons
Of Liquor Dumped

LISBON, June 18.—The first illicit stills to be found in Columbiana county for many months was seized on a farm near Salineville at 3 p. m. Friday by two federal agents from Youngstown, Sheriff Harry L. Cosney, Deputy Otto Stacey and Patrolman Dennis Hanley of Salineville.

The officers confiscated two stills, each being of 50-gallon capacity. Frank Dickson, 74, a Negro of Youngstown, caught operating the stills at the time, was taken to Youngstown for arraignment before a United States deputy marshal.

The raiding party dumped 500 gallons of mash and 100 gallons of whiskey. The place where the stills were operating is known as the Jones farm.

Goshen Juveniles
Observe Flag Day

Goshen Juvenile grange Friday evening observed Flag day with an appropriate program.

Miss Helen Starbuck was Miss Columbia; Mrs. Anna Carr, the matron, gave a reading, "Flag Day," and the juveniles sang, "America," to the tune of "America."

Sanders gave a reading, "The Birth of the Stars and Stripes;" Priscilla Beery gave a poem, "Our Flag," and Debora Beery led a history test.

"When I Salute the Flag" was given by Naomi Capel, and Joyce Hollinger gave a reading, "When the Flag Goes By." The program was closed by singing "The Star-Spangled Banner."

In two weeks the juveniles will have an Independence day program.

Geographic Lesson

KENOSHA, Wis.—A motorist in a dust-covered car with Montana license plates had been following the Lake Michigan shore line for miles and miles. Finally, he pulled up at the police station here.

"I've been driving for 30 miles along this river looking for a bridge," he complained. "Just how much farther do I have to go to find one and get across?"

On his way out the weary tourist admitted he "must have missed the Mississippi."

Misplaced Faith

BELLINGHAM, Wash.—Miles Rittenberg, about 80 and totally deaf, knew the northbound train passed his home between 4 and 5 o'clock in the afternoon.

Early last night Rittenberg went out on the right-of-way to cut greens for his rabbits. But the train was late.

Frantic whistles went unheeded and the deaf man died under the grinding wheels.

STERNER VIEW ON U. S. FOREIGN POLICY LOOMS

Congress Gone, Secretary
Hull Now Feels Free
To Talk

STRONGER TONE
TO BE EXPECTED

"Keep Them Guessing"
Has Been Policy Up
To Present

(By Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, June 18.—Some of the sterner aspects of the Roosevelt-Hull foreign policy may come to light with increasing frequency now that congress has packed up its sounding board and gone home.

Furthermore, there are clear indications that, during the nation's concern with domestic crisis, the state department has been quietly laying a new corner stone of policy: "Keep aggressor nations guessing." The old policy was one of calling every shot before it was made.

Bombings Condemned
Secretary of State Hull has new evidence that the American public condemns the barbarity of the warfare on both sides of the world; the senate in the closing hours of the session approved a resolution condemning the recent bombings of civilian populations.

These things and the Washington talk lead the reporter to anticipate further stern warnings to aggressor nations which, carrying no threat of war and no linguistic phrases, will indicate that (1) America is not tipping her hand now, and (2) Americans will not say under any circumstances that Americans would not fight—nor under what circumstances they would fight.

Clear expression of foreign policy has been difficult during this, as during every, session of congress. At such times, internationalists and pacifists use the congressional amplifier to send confusing echoes rolling, like ominous thunder, across the country.

And the explosions of such domestic issues as wages and hours and billions to lend and spend muffle such statements as Secretary Hull's recent appeal at Nashville to Americans and the world to throw the weight of their opinion against international anarchists.

Big Military Budget
Even the determination of the administration to put through the biggest peace-time military budget in history failed to be a clear indicator of the part Uncle Sam is playing in international affairs.

Just as congress closed there came an indicator of firmness—Admiral Yarnell's clipped sentences to the Japanese turning down the suggestion that he follow their advice as to the disposition of American warships in China.

The secretary of state, say his friends and some of his political adversaries, could take either of two roads. He could take the pacifist-isolationist one and advertise to the world that whatever happens, short of bombs dropped on American soil or fleets steaming into our harbors, we do not propose to fight. Or he could take the power-preparedness road and insist on suppressing in their inception movements which might lead to the bombs and fleets.

Therein has lain a dilemma, for he has advisers who tell him what he has hinted at in speeches: That if it becomes accepted in the capitals of the world that whatever happens, Americans will not fight, things will happen. They will happen in respect to the freedom of ports, the high seas, the property of Americans abroad, the lives of Americans on ships, the foreign trade of America, etc. In the end, they are almost certain of themselves to inflame an America which, for all its insistence on peace, can be goaded to war.

Congress Discourages
Still quoting persons who discuss this subject in strictly off-the-record fashion here, suppose he takes the other track. In the name of America, he speaks sharply and defiantly when these portentous things start to happen. It

Dr. Royal Copeland, New York Senator, Dies Was Victim of Overwork Against Which He'd Warned Colleagues

(By Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, June 18.—Sen. Royal S. Copeland, 69-year-old New York Democrat and physician-legislator, died last night—a victim of the overwork and congressional strain against which he often had cautioned his colleagues.

Death came at 7:45 p. m. at his apartment here after a sudden general circulatory collapse which was complicated by a kidney ailment.

His physician, Dr. Harry Kaufman, said the senator had "driven himself too hard" during the session of congress which ended Thursday night.

On Nine Committees
Copeland had stayed on the senate floor until almost the last, fighting a dozen major legislative battles under the heavy pressure of a pre-adjournment rush. In the last weeks of the session he served on nine separate committees to work out legislative differences between the house and senate.

His death was the second of a member of congress since the session's end. Rep. Allard H. Gasque (D-SC) died early Friday. He had been ill of a heart disease for some time.

Arrangements were made to take Copeland's body to his home at Suffern, N. Y., today. Funeral arrangements have not been completed.

Political friends and enemies—he had many of both—expressed shock and grief at news of the death.

Extends Condolences
President Roosevelt was one of the first to extend condolences to Mrs. Copeland who, with her son, Royal S. Jr., was at her husband's bedside. In a telegram from Nahant, Mass., the President said:

"We have been greatly shocked to hear of the senator's sudden death. Mrs. Roosevelt joins me in sending to you our very deep sympathy."

Senator Wagner, the junior New York senator, called that Copeland had struggled for days against growing illness to win a battle for the pure food and drug bill he had advocated for the last five years.

"I regarded him as a great and loyal American—a man with the courage of his convictions," Wagner said. "He was faithful to his principles and to his people. I am heartbroken."

Combining a career of medicine, public health and journalism with his political achievements, Copeland became one of the best-known American figures.

15 Years in the Senate
The amiable and dignified New Yorker had been in the senate 15 years and was one of the more influential members.

The physician was not given to flights of oratory but was a colorful figure on the senate floor. The red carnation he invariably wore in his lapel became a senate tradition. A full crop of silver-gray hair contributed to his striking appearance.

A veteran Tammany Hall chief, Copeland broke with the Roosevelt administration soon after it came into power. At times he was sharply critical of New Deal policies, and became more and more outspoken after President Roosevelt proposed the court reorganization bill. The New Yorker was one of those who helped defeat it.

Two Hurt As Autos
Crash On Route 30

Two persons were hurt when automobiles driven by Henry R. Lowman of East Liverpool and James R. Jamieson of Fargo, N. D., collided on Route 30, seven miles north of East Liverpool, at 2:35 p. m. Friday.

State Highway Patrolman James H. Smith said the crash occurred when he said the crash occurred when both drivers started to pass another car at the same time. Lowman suffered a cut lip and bruises to his face, while Mrs. Kermit Rardon of Midland, Pa., riding with her husband in Lowman's car, received a wrenched back and neck.

NEXT CONGRESS GETS PROBLEM OF RAILROADS

Some Congressmen, However, Say Special Session May Be Needed

UNEMPLOYMENT,
RELIEF LISTED

Proposed Tax Law Revision
Will Loom Large
At Next Session

(By Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, June 18.—A big program already is laid out for the new congress to be elected this fall.

What the 75th congress left undone, the 76th is likely to find on its docket when it convenes next January—unless there is a special session in the meantime.

No. 1 on almost everybody's list of problems for the next congress is what to do about the railroads. Some congressmen, including Chairman O'Connor (D-NY) of the house rules committee, have predicted that a special session may be necessary to rescue the railroad from their desperate financial plight.

Other Legislation
Among other legislation that congressional leaders said they believed congress necessarily would have to consider was the following:

1. Relief and unemployment—the 75th congress put this problem up to the next session by appropriating relief funds to last only to March 1.

2. Amendments to the Crop Control Act—farmer complaints about the rigid controls over planting and marketing already have forced upward revisions in cotton, wheat and tobacco quotas. Other changes may be necessary.

3. Revision of the tax laws—President Roosevelt let the tax bill passed this year, become law without his signature because, he said, congress had surrendered "the American principle of taxation" by modifying the undivided surplus and capital gains taxes. He made it plain that the next congress would be called upon to revise the tax structure.

4. Revision of anti-trust laws—President Roosevelt asked an investigation, about to be started by a 12-member committee, looking toward tightening up these laws. The committee will report to the new congress.

LOBBYISTS ARE LOBBYISTS

John L. Lewis and his CIO lieutenants posing for a picture on the steps of the capitol, the CIO chief sitting in the office of the speaker of the house and telling congressmen how he wants them to vote—does anyone dare to deny these are signs of CIO lobbying?

So what? So CIO spokesmen who may be inclined some time in the future to issue a blast against some other kind of lobbying will be in the position of denying to others the privilege they, themselves, cheerfully exercise. Lobbyists are lobbyists.

And human beings are human beings, with precious little difference among them. Once they've tasted power they want to keep on tasting it and rationalizing the tactics they pursue is as natural as the whiskers on their chins. It all depends on whose ox is gored—or has someone said that before?

GOOD BOY JOHNNY

While "a weary congress ground its way to adjournment" Thursday the congressmen's countrymen didn't give a hoot. They were talking about a boy named Johnny Vander Meer.

It was incredible that a freshman baseball pitcher should have pitched two no hit-no run games in a row, which was Johnny's claim to fame—and a mighty stout one. That's why the politicians were neglected and Johnny got the center of the stage.

The politicians all seem convinced the country isn't what it used to be and they must save it, even if it's fatal. Johnny, who probably doesn't care much about the country but is interested intensely in making a place for himself in it, got in there and pitched so well that all the sour pussies and head wagers had to admit one vital department of the country, baseball, hasn't seen nothin' yet. It was just what the doctor ordered for the end of a congressional session.

"LET THEM ALL COME"

Nahant, Mass., one mile square and built on solid rock, wants everybody to come to the country's most widely advertised June wedding—the ceremony which will make John Roosevelt and Anne Clark man and wife. Nahant's wish will be fulfilled, no doubt.

It will be a gala day for as many persons as will be able to crowd into the town—perhaps as many as 200,000. There will be hot dog stands, cold drink stands and gadget salesmen. There will be notable by the dozen and those who aspire to be noticed will be on hand by the hundreds. "Let them all come," say the village fathers of Nahant (pop. 1,600)—"the public has its rights."

Which is another way of saying a June bride and groom who happen to be caught in the vortex of politics don't have any rights worth mentioning. They must be wondering by this time why they didn't plan to be married in the Yankee stadium in the first place, with the President throwing the bride's bouquet from the pitcher's box to home plate.

THE POINT BEING MISSED

Mayor Frank Hague's testimony in the suit brought by the American Civil Liberties Union and the CIO for an injunction against repressive measures by Jersey City reveals clearly the point being missed in the controversy which boils about the attitude of this typical political boss.

It is the fact that he is typical, not unique. His views on the necessity of maintaining order, on the property of granting civil rights to persons and organizations interested only in using them to weaken the government which guarantees them, and his complete acceptance of the doctrine that fire must be fought with fire are fairly representative of a considerable part of American public opinion.

That does not make Mayor Hague right and his critics wrong. Rather, it proves how grave is the challenge to political stability in the United States which is being issued by groups which have taken it upon themselves to bedevil those who disagree with them. Mayor Hague's reactionary and arbitrary stand is a sample, not an isolated instance.

It was in this way that left wing groups in Italy and Germany goaded the opposition into direct retaliation and produced dictatorial government. It happened in those countries because moderates, caught between the fire from hostile extremists, were powerless to save themselves. Moderates in this country must see the danger in time to defend themselves—not against the left, nor against the right, but against both extremes, equally intent on destruction of civil liberties for everybody but themselves.

WEST CANADA WORRIES OVER ASIATIC INFLUX

VANCOUVER, B. C.—Rigid passport and registration regulations are being urged for Oriental immigrants in British Columbia as a result of the Dominion commission investigation into alleged illegal entry of aliens into Canada.

Complete control of commercial activities in which both Japanese and Chinese are engaged was recommended in a brief submitted by Vancouver aldermen.

The brief requested that gradual transfer of the Oriental population of British Columbia to the other eight provinces in the Dominion be effected as rapidly as occupational pursuits permit so that the present provincial level of the Oriental population might be kept constant until the total population reaches 1,500,000. At that time, the fixed number of Orientals could be increased by agreement, the brief suggested.

THE STARS SAY:

For Sunday, June 19

Sunday's horoscope holds testimonies of great enterprise and initiative. It is a time when highly-stimulated energies and practical plans and programs should carry through brilliantly, with position and probably honors following. It is auspicious to seek these from superiors and those in authority, with the confidence born of work well done.

Those whose birthday it is will find themselves deep in a year of very active programs, with the faculties and forces under high stimuli for achievement, gratification and probably honors or tokens of appreciation from high places. Creative ability, sound methods and well-directed efforts should spell success to ambitious projects.

A child born on this day may be energetic, aggressive, enterprising and not averse to taking chances in a big way. It may also be public spirited, humane, kindly and disposed to help its fellows forward on a sound basis.

For Monday, June 20

Monday's astrological forecast is for a day of rather conflicting conditions, with many events underlined by peculiar, secret or even sinister situations. There may be much perplexity and anxiety owing to these subtle situations, which may bring sorrow to some. Young persons may give concern. There are signs of duplicity or fraud, and intrigues in intimate associations may not be pleasant.

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for a year of contradictory conditions, with some joys and successes, but much anxiety, doubt, perplexity, intrigue and treachery, although there also are signs of friendly circumstances. Safeguard the health, be careful with writings and not overanxious about youthful problems.

A child born on this day may be lively, versatile, probably crafty and more or less irresponsible, being changeable, adventurous and romantic. Yet, it may have a serious side and may have a brilliant mind.

HEALTH

By Dr. Royal S. Copeland,
New York City.

ANGINA PECTORIS

There are many more or less serious ailments of the heart, "Angina pectoris," as it is called, is one that causes much physical discomfort and great mental anxiety.

It is a common affliction of middle aged or elderly men. It is less frequent in women of the same age, and it rarely attacks young adults.

When I first practiced medicine, little was known about what to do for angina. So far as anything curative was concerned, the victim was left to his fate. Much progress has been made and the modern physician is able to control it, and in many instances to offer a cure.

In angina pectoris the coronary, the blood vessels of the heart wall, are involved. There is a narrowing of the vessels and occasionally there may be spasm or contraction of the vessels.

Several factors contribute to the onset of these attacks. Exertion, severe fatigue, worry and other emotional disturbances may bring on the angina pectoris.

Pain in Chest

The name means pain in the chest, of course, and that exactly describes the condition. The victim complains of pain over the middle or upper part of the chest, radiating to the left shoulder, neck and inner side of the left arm. There is a feeling of pressure, gripping or burning. The pain may be high in the chest and this gives a sensation of strangling or suffocation.

Usually the patient learns to assume certain positions, finding that when he does so the pain is lessened. If he presses forward, the pain is increased, spreading to the neck and jaw.

Persons who suffer from mild attacks of what really is angina often believe the discomfort is due to heartburn or indigestion. This is unfortunate, because failure to discover that the discomfort is really due to heart trouble causes the necessary precautions to be overlooked. Bear in mind that the danger of angina pectoris is not in the disease, but in the neglect of it.

If you have repeated discomfort around the heart or near the heart, consult your doctor. It is probably caused by some trivial disturbance, but you must be sure about it. Never resort to self-diagnosis. The treatment should be given under medical supervision.

Tennessee Valley Authority Files Report With FDR

WASHINGTON, June 18.—The Tennessee Valley Authority has completed its first step in establishing a "yard-stick" to measure power production costs.

Chairman Harcourt A. Morgan reported the findings to President Roosevelt in a letter made public last night.

The cost of three completed dams—Wilson, Norris and Wheeler—was placed at $94,125,671, of which 52 per cent was charged against electricity production, 28 per cent for navigation and 20 per cent for flood control.

The TVA committee on financial policy made the study. It charged nothing against national defense. Fertilizer operations also were exempted because they were being charged for services rendered by various departments of TVA.

The chairman said TVA engineers estimated, "on a basis which appears reasonable to us," that power revenues from the three completed projects would cover all costs of operation, return 3 per cent on the investment in power, and "in addition, return in 30 years the entire investment allocated to navigation and flood control."

Nothing is more profitable than manufacturing excuses; there are good reasons why you cannot sometimes attend church, but Satan laughs up his sleeve at any little excuse that sidetracks your best interest by refusing to go to church.

I Am The Bread of Life

Bread has been called the staff of life. For it is man's chief food. During their wanderings in the wilderness, the Israelites were supplied with a wonderful bread from heaven. Referring to this Jesus says: "I am that bread of life. Your fathers did eat manna in the wilderness and are dead. This is the bread which cometh down from heaven that man may eat thereof, and not die."

Man's soul needs food, as well as his body. Christ is the living bread, man's spiritual food. To feed upon Christ is to receive Him by faith. To receive the sweet doctrines of the Bible by reading, learning and inwardly digesting them. We often feed upon Christ by hearing sermons also; and in a very special way, at the Lord's Table. Your body is well nourished. Is your soul starving?

Complete services and announcements are as follows:

Sunday school, 9:45—(Mark 8:27-38)—Charles W. Ycutz, superintendent.

Making your life count is a worthwhile goal. But where shall it count, is a most important question. It may count only for the world. It should be made to count for God. Life has not reached its highest and best place unless that life counts for some good for Christ and His Kingdom. Finding your life is most worthwhile. There is no better way to find your life than in serving God. Empty is that life that never serves God and fellow-men.

Morning worship, 11, sermon.

This Sunday is Father's day. The influence of a father in a home is most essential. The ideals and standards of a Christian father can be conducive to the making of impressions that will never be forgotten. The teaching influence of the father may be far less than that of the mother, but the part that the father of a boy as given to us in the New Testament gladly saw the day when his boy returned home. His faithful watching was rewarded.

The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "The true man, is not in material history, but in spiritual development. Inspired thought relinquishes a material, sensual, and mortal theory of the universe, and adopts the spiritual and immortal" (p. 547).

He has represented the United States in this official capacity by appointment of Presidents Wilson, Hoover and Roosevelt.

He formerly made his home in New York, but since assuming his new post with the Red Cross has bought an historic residence in Alexandria, Virginia, across the Potomac from the nation's capital.

New National Progressive Party Grooms Six States

(By International News Service)

MADISON, Wis.—Six liberal states—Minnesota, New York, Wisconsin, California, Washington and Iowa—are being groomed as the "cornerstones" of the National Progressive party, Gov. Philip F. La Follette declared today.

Discussing his future plans for an attempted political realignment in America through a third party venture, the 41-year-old governor said: "The party will find its base in those states that have recently included new parties on their ballots—such as the American Labor Party in New York, the Progressives in Wisconsin, and the other new ventures in Iowa, California, Minnesota and Washington."

Expects Party Endorsement

It is the belief of La Follette, who launched the National Progressives a month ago, that in each of these states, the parties, although each retains its own identity, will endorse the N. P. A. in their conventions.

"Until that is done there will not be any party platform," he said, "for a party platform must spring from the people represented by the party. After such endorsement, a national convention to draw up a platform can be called."

In his "party launching" address and subsequent speeches, Gov. La Follette made himself the target for criticism by leaving unanswered many questions concerning the party objectives and proposed methods of solving America's economic and political problems.

Has No Platform

Asked "just how are you going to do it?" La Follette replied: "That is not my task. I can not lay out the program for the N. P. A., no more than Mr. Hoover or Mr. Roosevelt can tell the Republicans or Democrats what their party platform shall be."

La Follette said that the third party movement had received a "tremendous favorable response" throughout the nation. Although La Follette launched the party "with 1940 as the first objective," he refused to say whether the N. P. A. will propose any national candidates for the next presidential election.

"There is too much work to be done building the cornerstone base to think of national candidates right now," he said.

La Follette declared: "We will talk about things after they are done. We must avoid loose predictions, thus giving rise to false hopes. We have to build this party so when we say a thing, we mean it. The best way to do that is through advance predictions on what we are going to do."

SYNOPSIS

Gregory Sallust, young English private investigator, is greatly interested in the affairs of the beautiful Hungarian girl, Sabine Szent, for two reasons: first, because her beauty and charm are irresistible; second, because she is associated with Lord Gavin Fortescue, a sinister, shadowy figure in international affairs. Fortescue is a strange looking little man, curiously misshapen. Sallust knows him by reputation and has begun to suspect that he and Sabine are concerned in certain illegal activities which Gregory is investigating for Sir Pellinore Gwaine-Cust, a British industrial giant. Gregory and Sabine have become friends, although she will tell him nothing of herself or her relations with Fortescue. In saving Inspector Wells of Scotland Yard from a brawl in a cafe near Deauville, France, where Sabine had lured the victim, Gregory gains possession of a mysterious coded telegram dropped during the fight. Sabine refuses to enlighten Gregory on the telegram, warning him it is dangerous to know too much. She agrees to spend the following day with the infuriated Gregory. Dining at a roadside inn, Sabine is filled with apprehension for Gregory's safety when she sees "The Lamper," one of Lord Gavin's henchmen, watching them. Later, when Gregory goes to get his car, he is attacked by a man who throws pepper in his eyes. Sabine disappears. Returning to England, Gregory's suspicions of Lord Gavin Fortescue are confirmed by Sir Pellinore and Gregory calls on Inspector Marrowfat to establish a working agreement with the police. Although Marrowfat tells Gregory there is no connection between Gregory's assignment and the matter the police are investigating, he orders Wells to shadow Gregory as he may lead them to something important. That same evening, with his servant, Rudd, Gregory flies to Calais, France. Later that night he and Rudd, pretending to be stranded with a broken-down car, sit drinking in a certain grimy "Cafe de la Cloche" mentioned in the mysterious telegram. About midnight they leave to trail five rough looking fellows who have been summoned from the cafe by the sound of a motor horn.

CHAPTER X

"Good lad," muttered Gregory to Rudd when they were finally clear of the cafe. "We managed that exit splendidly. Now, where's our curly-haired assassin go?" They could not see the man, but fifty yards down the road stood a car. Keeping in the shadows they made their way along the side of the cafe and then by a wide detour through an adjoining field until they came opposite the place where the car stood in the roadway.

Like the majority of French roads, there was no hedge separating it from the field, behind which they could shelter, but only a ditch, so they had to get down on their hands and knees and crawl the last twenty yards to avoid being seen against the skyline.

The car was a powerful limousine and "Corot" was standing by its doorway on the side nearest the ditch. A faint light lit the interior of the car and Gregory smiled in the darkness as he recognized the small hunched figure on the back seat. Then he caught his breath, for beyond Lord Gavin sat Sabine looking even more beautiful than his memory of her. He grasped Rudd's arm and pressed it.

"Take a good look at the old boy," he whispered. "That's the fellow we're after, Lord Gavin Fortescue's henchman. Looks like an archbishop, doesn't he, but he probably deserves to die kicking at the end of a rope more than any man in Europe. Think you'd know him again?"

"Sure thing, sir," Rudd whispered back. "Looks like a monkey on a stick ter me, but it's got a distinguished sort of dial I will say. And ain't his girl friend a bit of a sight?"

Lord Gavin was talking in a quick, low voice to "Corot." The watchers could not catch his words but they saw him pass over a sheaf of papers.

The handsome knife thrower touched his checked cap, then closed the car door and it was driven away at a high speed towards Boulogne.

For a second Gregory considered attacking the thug for the purpose of seizing the papers he had just received from Lord Gavin, but the chances were that if they set on him, his shouts would bring his four friends tumbling out of the cafe before they could master him and get away. In any case, Gregory decided, more valuable information would probably be obtained by remaining under cover for the time being and following the man to see where he went.

"Corot" returned at once to the cafe, but only to poke his head inside the door.

A moment later, the four others joined him outside and the whole party set off together up the road Gregory saw that all five of them were now carrying things that looked like fat cylinders or oil drums slung across their backs.

He gave them a few minutes' start, then followed. It was easy to keep the group in view as the road switched towards the rising ground and on each crest they stood out plainly silhouetted against the starlit sky. After a mile they left the main road and took a track leading in the direction of the coast. Along this Gregory and Rudd had more difficulty in keeping sight of them as it wound in and out among the dips and hillocks of the deserted downland.

No lights were to be seen in any direction and Gregory knew that they were now well inside that desolate wind-swept triangle, entirely lacking in roads and villages, which lies between the three points, Boulogne, Calais and Cape Gris Nez.

A good two miles were covered, then the Frenchmen turned in the direction of Boulogne again, leaving the track now to trudge over the short coarse grass.

Twice Gregory lost his quarry for a moment but on each occasion he managed to pick them up again because, all unsuspecting, they were laughing and talking as they walked and their voices carried clearly through the still warm night.

They had long since left behind the last twinkling lights of Calais town. It was over an hour since they had left the inn and in all that time they had not passed a single farmhouse, or seen a human being. The slopes began to rise more steeply and Gregory realized that they were moving towards the high ground which dominates that uninhabited area and is known as Mount Couple.

The group in front suddenly fell silent and must have turned off in a new direction, for Gregory lost the shadowy blur of their moving figures in the semi-darkness for the third time, and now, although he chanced discovery by trotting forward a hundred yards he failed to regain touch with them.

Cursing his ill luck he stumbled up a low mound and, pulling his night glasses from his raincoat pocket, began to scan the surrounding country. For ten minutes or more, with Rudd beside him, he swept the darkened downs, first in one direction then in another without success, until he suddenly caught sight of a faint glow which had just appeared a quarter of a mile away, throwing the line of the next ridge up into sharp relief. Instantly they set off towards it.

As they advanced the silvery glow grew perceptibly brighter, throwing all the surrounding country into a heavier darkness. Half way up the ridge Gregory suddenly slipped to his knees, pulling Rudd down beside him. From that point they wriggled up the last hundred yards on their stomachs.

Below them stretched a broad shallow dip in the very center of the high ground they had been traversing. The men they had followed had already set up two of their cylinders, from which there now hissed bright acetylene burners, and were busy with a third at the far end of the valley bottom.

Soon they had completed their work and had all five flares going, spaced at irregular intervals but marking out a fiery T at one end of a wide stretch of level grassy land hidden from any casual observer beyond its ring of encircling hills.

Suddenly Gregory pricked up his ears. He had caught the hum of an airplane overhead. A moment later the noise ceased and a big bomber passed low overhead, outlined in black silhouette against the starry sky; then, sinking rapidly, came land over the flares, taking its way in direction from their formation.

Its pilot taxied it toward the farther slope, and there the farmer met it; but Gregory's attention was taken from it momentarily by the sound of another plane coming up from a different quarter. It circled slowly overhead, came down into the wind, and taxied up along side the first arrival.

For the next quarter of an hour plane after plane arrived at the more than minute intervals, and Gregory's eyes were now riveted to the activities of the men on the ground. Their number had increased to half a hundred and they had not landed from any of the planes. They were emerging from a shadowy patch at the far end of the valley, and all carried cases or boxes on their shoulders, while carrying a fresh load of cargo to the earliest airplanes to arrive at the secret depot.

At first Gregory was puzzled as to where the men with supplies were coming from. There were no roads or tracks within a couple of miles of this lonely spot and so the could not have been brought by car or truck and no dumps were to be seen, although the men kept appearing in the shadows in an irregular chain to return each carrying a fresh load of cargo to the waiting fleet.

Touching Rudd on the arm, he began to crawl stealthily along the crest of the ridge, keeping just within the belt of shadow, until he could get a better view of the plane from which this chain of supplies continued to make its mysterious appearance.

After covering two hundred yards he was able to view the proceeding from a new angle, and noticed what looked like a black slit in the steep slope of the natural bank below them. It must be, he guessed, the entrance to an underground passage, leading down through the old chalk caves to one of the little fishing villages, Sandgate or Wissant on the coast, a mile or so away.

Rudd could restrain his curiosity no longer.

"What's the game, sir?" he asked in a hoarse whisper.

"Smugglers, my boy," said Gregory grimly. "For the last two years this outfit has been costing Britain a million pounds a month in revenue, but there's more to it than that. These birds are out to wreck the old firm of J. Bull, Home, Dymunions and Colonial, unless we can stop 'em. D'you feel like running a marathon?"

"Orders is orders and got to be obeyed," said Mr. Rudd.

"Come on then," Gregory dragged back into the deeper shadows and stood up. "We're going to run now as we've never run in our lives. We've got to be in the air again before Gavin Fortescue's fleet starts on its way to England."

NAZIS THREATEN SEA DOMINATION

Germans Intensify Fortifications Around Mediterranean

LONDON, June 18.—British domination of the western end of the Mediterranean is being seriously jeopardized by the intensification of German fortifications on both sides of the Straits of Gibraltar.

Lord Farington, well-known member of the House of Lords, charged today.

He claimed to be in possession of information from "the most reliable and authoritative sources" showing that there had been recent reinforcements of guns of German origin in Spain and Morocco.

According to this information modern guns of large calibre, capable of maintaining an intensive cross-fire across the straits, have been placed in strategic positions on both sides of the narrow channel, effectively destroying the supposedly dominating position of British-held Gibraltar.

Sees Sinister Aim
"It seems to be sinister," Lord Farington said, "that at a time when one would have thought the Fascist forces in Spain would be concentrating all their resources, wealth and material, on the battle-fronts, they, or somebody acting for them, are taking so much pains to fortify this extremely vital passage through the Straits of Gibraltar."

"The construction of these batteries of very heavy artillery in positions so vital to Britain seem to me to reinforce the many warnings and add to the fears which have been expressed as to the dangers which will follow the success of the Fascist invasion of Spain. These guns could command the Straits and make it impossible for shipping to pass through, and would render the harbor of Gibraltar valueless for naval purposes."

Giving details of the alleged fortifications, Lord Farington mentioned long range guns of 35-centimetres and modern anti-aircraft guns of 7.5 centimetres, secretly placed on hillsides and effectively hidden in small woods.

Describes Size of Guns
Between Benzo and Ceuta, on the Moroccan coast, he alleged, three big German guns of 12-inch calibre have been mounted, while at Punta Blanca German engineers have mounted a battery of 31.5 centimetre guns, perfectly camouflaged and solidly placed, with automatic loading trays. Subterranean passages have been constructed to permit communication between the crews of the various guns, Lord Farington said.

The guns on the Moroccan side, according to his lordship, guaranteed a positive cross-fire being maintained with those operating from the Spanish side, while the anti-aircraft batteries, of the most modern type, were believed capable of repelling any air attacks.

In view of the completeness of Lord Farington's information, he was invited by the government to place his sources at the disposal of the British authorities, for investigation of the charges.

New Plane Base To Bolster U. S. Pacific Defenses

SAN FRANCISCO — Mid-Pacific defenses of the United States will be strengthened by a $1,000,000 seaplane base at Midway Island.

The base will jointly serve the navy and commercial transoceanic airlines.

On August 1 the navy transport Sirius is scheduled to sail from San Francisco with 80 to 100 planes, men under command of Lieut. W. J. Ely.

The Sirius also will carry 120 tons of engineering equipment to the project.

The preliminary ground work construction of a camp is now under way at Midway. Twenty-five men of the United States engineers are constructing the camp.

The project calls for the dredging of a 6,000 foot channel through the 18 mile barrier reef to permit safe entry to the lagoon of ocean freighters, and the building of a 3,000 foot breakwater to provide a safe anchorage for seaplanes.

The breakwater will be built across the white coral bottom from Sand Island, site of Pan-American Airways' mid-ocean hotel, seaplane base and golf course, toward Easter Island.

Major T. E. Bernier, U. S. district engineer at Honolulu, will supervise the project.

Congress Gone, Secretary
Hull Now Feels Free
To Talk
should give the nations of the world pause; but it does not if his words are thrown back in his face from many of the representatives of forty-eight states, and some territories, who make it plain that, whatever his threats, America is not going to back them up.
The presence of a loud-speaking congress, jealous of its own part in shaping foreign policy, certain to subject every such utterance to suspicious scrutiny, discourages the procedure along that line.
That is the reason official Washington would not be surprised now to hear stronger language. The spokesmen of official Washington assume that the state department knows better than anyone else what is happening in the world that might jeopardize peace here.
There is suspicion that some of the incidents may justify sharper language which, under these circumstances, will have time to sink in abroad.

Cope will make his final trip on June 26, after which he plans to take it easy for a short time at his suburban home. Because he doesn't feel like retiring or resting too much, he plans to become an orchardist and probably operate a roadside market.
The veterans railway mail clerk is well-known to Salem residents through his Association with farm groups here. It was Cope who fostered the idea which developed into the Salem Farmers Institute, now an annual event.
He is a member of Salem grange on the Depot rd., has gone through all the subordinate offices, is a member of the Pomona grange as well as the state and national organizations. He also belongs to the Sons of Veterans and the Odd Fellows.
He was born and reared at Rogers, moving to Salem shortly after his marriage at Wellsville Oct. 20, 1904. Mrs. Cope, like her husband, is an active grange member. They have three sons, Frederick, Donald and Bruce.
